when the engine is built or rebuilt the timing marks are used to set the timing for first start. once the engine is running, because of the number of teeth on the various gears the marks may only realign again after 20 or 30 or 50 or any other number of revolutions. if the vehicle runs well the timing is correct, if it were not you would be aware of it. slow to start is more likely to be a glow plug or compression problem assuming you do not have a fuel drain back or air leak issue.

The timing mark will be either on the harmonic balancer or in a hole in the bell housing. If in the bell housing there will be a pointer that will point to marks on the flywheel face and the timing mark will be ING or a number like 15 or 17 or 21 . This is the number of degrees before TDC that your engine has to be set on for correct timing.
